In the Evening there was a Grand Ball for the Ladies, and the whole was conducted with the uſual Magnificence and Grandeur.

Aprill 10 It may not be improper to obſerve, that in the Space of fourteen Days, no leſs than nine Sail of Veſſels arrived at Dublin, with Wheat from France; that Grain being imported ſo cheap from thence as to amount to a Prohibition of it from England. The French have alſo, for ſome time paſt, underſold us in that Commodity at Lisbon, and other Foreign Markets, where Corn has been in Demand, ſo as, in a great Meaſure, to have render'd the Importation of it from Great Britain, too hazardous for any to undertake.

Frederica in Georgia, May 10. On ſeveral Complaints from the Spaniards, Mr. Ogletborpe ask'd the Creek Indians, who lately came hither from the Nation, whether they were true, and and, if ſo, why they had fallen upon them? The Indians anſwered, That two Hunting Seaſons ago, they being in full Peace, as they thought, with the Spaniards, and ſuſpecting nothing, a Detachment of Men ſent out by the Governor of Auguſtine, fell upon three of their Families in the Night, and firing in upon them kill'd ſome, and wounded and took both Men Women and Children; and moſt barbarouſly murder'd their Priſoners: That in the Beginning of the Winter Hunt, which was about November laſt, ſome Parties of the Creeks went out to take Revenge, and one of thoſe Parties, conſiſting of five Men, had taken a Spaniſh Fort call'd Picolata, within ſeven Leagues of Auguſtine, towards the Apalachees, where they killed one Spaniard who reſiſted, but the others made their Eſcape.

Mr. Ogletborpe acquainted them, that he had ſent Boats to lie in St. Juan's River, to adviſe thoſe of their Nation not to paſs it, and to hinder the Spaniards coming over to hurt them. They told him not to truſt the Spaniards, and deſir'd him to aſſiſt them in obtaining Revenge, for that they were under the Protection of the Crown of England, and that the Engliſhmen ought to help them. That if the Spaniards would make Reſtitution for the Indians they had kill'd, they would, if Mr. Ogletborpe deſired it, when the Nation met at the next Buſk, make Propoſals to them concerning a Peace with the Spaniards; but there were ſeveral Parties now out, and they could not tell where to find them, but that moſt of them were in the Apalachee old Fields, to prevent the Spaniards finiſhing the Fort they had begun on thoſe Lands about a Year ago without their Leave.

On Saturday May 1. arrived Capt. Ferguſon with the Carolina Scout-Boat, with an Account that Major Richards and Mr. Horton, who carried Anſwers to the Spaniſh Governor's Letters, had landed at their Look-out, and he believed were made Priſoners by the Spaniards, for they had heard no more of them, excepting by a blind Letter wrote with a Pencil and brought by a Spaniard, that the Boat and Men under the Command of Capt. Hermſdorf had left Point St. George, that the Men were mutinous, and he was apprehenſive they would either murder their Officers and turn Pirates, or be taken Priſoners by the Spaniards.

Mr. Ogletborpe on Sunday Morning went on board the Man of War, and proceeded with the Georgia Scout-Boat and the Man of War's Boat in Company, under the Command of the Lieutenant, that arrived that Night at Fort St. Andrews: On monday morning they came up with the ſouth Point of Cumberland, where they met with the Boats under the Command of Capt Hermſdorf: Mr. Ogletborpe immediately took them out to Sea with him round Amelia Iſland, he found that the men did not intend to mutiny, and that the Suſpicion was occaſion'd by the Lies of one man, who was puniſh'd by running the Gantlet. He went up to St. Georges Point within ſight of the Spaniſh Look-out, and ſettled them at the ſame Place where Mr. Hermſdorf had taken up his Quarters, it being agreed that the Spaniards at the Return of Major Richards ſhould make a ſignal, and from thence he would repair with his Boat to fetch him off; and alſo that from thence the Boats would patrole up and down the Rivers, to prevent the Indians in Alliance with the Engliſh paſſing over to hurt the Spaniards, as they ſhould prevent their Indians paſſing over to moleſt us.

Mr. Ogletborpe went that Afternoon to the Spaniſh Look-out with a Flag of Truce, but not being able to perceive any one, leaving the Boats at a Grapling, leap'd out to ſee if he could diſcover any Ambuſh, and walk'd along the Sea-Beach at a Diſtance from the ſandy Hillocks, to prevent Surprize; he ſurrounded the Hillocks, where he found two Horſes hopled; he went up to a Palmetto Hut, but could find no Men; upon this he ſent the Flag of Truce up into a great Savannah, to try if he could draw down any People to a Conference.

Charles-Town in South-Carolina, June 12.

By the Georgia Meſſenger we are inform'd, that coming to the Uchee Town he heard that two of the Uchee Women were killed by the Yamaſees, and that Mr. Goodale was gone to Savannah Town to give an Account thereof, that the Uchees being at Allatamaha might cut off the Yamaſees in their March back to Auguſtine. The latter left behind the uſual Tokens of War, viz. a War-ſtick with 20 Notches (ſuppoſed ſo many People) with the reſemblance of a Perſon cut theereon, a Swan-skin, an old Jacket, and a Spaniſh Tom-hawk.

By Capt Yoakley we hear, that Mr. Ogletborpe was gone to Savannah, and is now hourly expected here.

Boſton, July 12. The following Piece is an exact Tranſlation of the laſt Will and Teſtament of an Indian Miniſter at Gay-Head, upon Martha's Vineyard, who died ſometime the laſt Fall, as we have it from the Judge of Probate for Duke's County, before whom it was proved and approved. The Idiom of the Indian Language is preſerved as well as it could be; all that needs Explanation in it is, firſt the Name that he gives his Houſe, for the common Indian Houſes have no Cellars to them. Secondly, the Witneſs that calls himſelf Ruler of Men, was the Ruling Elder of the Church there.

At Gay Head, Sept. 9th, Anno Dom. 1735.

------ Sept. 9th 1735.
